Total marks : 100

Time : 45 minutes

A. Read the passage.Edison the Great Inventor

Think about your daily life. We call our friends using the telephone. We turn on the lights to read and write. We listen to music using CDs. We watch movies in movie theatres. Have you ever wonder who invented all these things? As you may have heard of, these inventions were invented by Thomas Edison. He was seen as the greatest inventor ever in America.

Thomas Edison was born in Ohio in 1847. When he was young, he almost never attended school. His mother, who used to be a teacher, taught him to read, write and calculate. He was curious about everything, so he read a lot of books on his own. As he grew up, he became fascinated with technology, so he started to work on science experiments at home. To earn money for buying equipment for experiments, he started selling candy when he was 12. From his childhood, we can see why he eventually became a successful inventor.

When Edison was twenty-nine, he established his own industrial research lab. He and his employees worked day and night on research and development. Over his career as an inventor, he invented or improved inventions such as telegraph, telephone, light bulb, movie camera and viewer, phonograph, electricity system and battery. These inventions influenced our lives greatly, such that even after more than a hundred years, we are still using his inventions!

Our lives keep improving thanks to great inventors such as Thomas Edison. Nowadays, there are also many great inventors working hard all over the world. Do you want to be one of them too?
